

HODA TAWAKOL

Born in London (1968) and raised in Paris, Hoda Tawakol is a Franco-Egyptian artist based in Hamburg, Germany. Her practice is built on the twin pillars of wit and criticality. Her colourful, engaging textile works—collages, sculptures, installations—ripple with vitality while tackling compelling issues of gender and bodily control. At once captivating and disarming, the works spring from a range of media, yet focus largely on the female body, its distortions and transformations across a woman's life. In a universe of transformation, the body forever hovers between physical and ethereal, reality and abstraction, presence and absence.

While her artistic strategy is focused on topics touching on certain cultural practices, patriarchal social structures and the ancient relationship between body and nature; her material mastery is vast. A diversity of unpredictable hand-dyeing techniques—batik, spotting, painting, tie-dye—vivify her textile work. Her sculptures, whether assertively figurative or cryptically morphed, enlist a variety of materials - the braided mesh of the veil, bulbous nylons filled with rice, portraits with blankets and felt - with which she consistently experiments. In 2023, for her first solo institutional exhibition at the Dortmunder Kunstverein, Germany, the artist created an installation of large-format textile sculptures transforming the premises into a palm grove – figuratively too as a place of fruitful utopias and of resistance, between sensuality and brutality.
